“While we play a lot of the hits, we also delve into some of their other songs,” Call explains. “We mix it up. I mean we could play over 70 songs with the snap of a finger because we rotate the songs so much. So, someone that saw us one time might come back, and they would get a totally different show the next time.”

What makes their shows so special for Call is the opportunity to transport people to another time, allowing fans to relive happy memories and past glories as they flashback. Because of this mission, the Classic Stones Live doesn’t use their platform to improvise. The tribute band is very much dedicated to giving the audience that authentic sound. Rather than take liberties with the music, or reinterpret it as some tribute acts might, the group works to create performances as close to the original recordings as possible. And with countless hit songs transporting an endless number of fans to their glory days, the group takes pride in this perfection.

“There’s a lot of great tribute bands out there,” Call says. “And there’s other Rolling Stones tribute bands, but ours being an eight-piece, we’re able to replicate everything down to almost how it sounds on the record. We’re very meticulous about doing songs in their original tuning. So, that’s why we’ll have 13 guitars on stage, two keyboards and so on and so forth so that we can replicate those songs just like people remember them.”

As one of rock ‘n’ roll’s most popular bands ever, a free show played in Brazil in 2006 brought an estimated crowd of 1.2 to 1.5 million people. While the real Jagger and Richards are both still dancing around the stage at the age of 75, Classic Stones Live looks to keep the music alive for many more years to come. And while the Rolling Stones continue to sell out arenas all over the world, tickets averaged $624 for their 50th anniversary tour in 2013. On April 5, the Classic Stones Live aim to create the same wild and theatrical show when they visit the Strand Center Theatre — only without breaking the bank.

“I think the most rewarding thing about it is after the show, when we get to talk to some of the fans. When someone comes up and says, ‘You brought me back to 1975 when I saw the Stones at Madison Square Garden,’ you could just see that happiness,” he recalls. “They can revisit the memories, and being part of that, making people happy, I feel like we did our job if we can do that.”

The Strand Center for the Arts will present Classic Stones Live with The Glimmer Twins on Friday, April 5 at 8 p.m. Tickets cost $29 to $49 in advance or $34 to $54 the day of the show. For more information or to purchase tickets, call 518-563-1604 ext. 104 or visit strandcenter.org.
